is it possible to hold on to faith in an age of unbelief intellectual certainty has long been a cornerstone of the christian faith but in an age of secularism skepticism and cynicism our worldviews have been shaken various solutions exist some double down on certainty while others deconstruct their faith until there is nothing left at all but brian zahnd offers a third way what is needed is not a demolition but instead a renovation of faith written with personal and pastoral experience zahnd extends an invitation to move beyond the crisis of faith toward the journey of reconstruction as the world rapidly changes in ways that feel incompatible with christianity when everything s on fire provides much needed hope a stronger more confident faith is possible when it is grounded in the beauty and truth of christ zahnd permits us to risk the journey of deconstruction so that god can forge something more beautiful in its place the real represents to my perception the things that we cannot possibly not know sooner or later in one way or another wrote henry james in 1907 this description riven with double negatives hesitation and uncertainty encapsulates the epistemological difficulties of realism for underlying its narrative and descriptive apparatus as an aesthetic mode lies a philosophical quandary what grounds the real of the realist novel what kind of perception is required to validate the experience of reality how does the realist novel represent the difficulty of knowing what comes to the fore in james s account as in so many is how the forms of realism are constituted by a relation to unknowing absence and ineffability realism form and representation in the edwardian novel recovers a neglected literary history centred on the intricate relationship between fictional representation and philosophical commitment it asks how or if we can conceptualize realist novels when the objects of their representational intentions are realities that might exist beyond what is empirically verifiable by sense data or analytically verifiable by logic and are thus irreducible to conceptual schemes or linguistic practices a formulation charlotte jones refers to as synthetic realism in new readings of edwardian novels including conrad s nostromo and the secret agent wells s tono bungay and ford s the good soldier this volume revises and reconsiders key elements of realist novel theory metaphor and metonymy character interiority the insignificant detail omniscient narration and free indirect discourse causal linearity to uncover the representational strategies by which realist writers grapple with the recalcitrance of reality as a referential anchor and seek to give form to the force opacity and uncertain scope of realities that may lie beyond the material in restoring a metaphysical dimension to the realist novel s imaginary realism form and representation in the edwardian novel offers a new conceptualization of realism both within early twentieth century literary culture and as a transhistorical mode of representation a scrupulous study of shakespeare's The Tempest and its most comprehensive rewriting, Indigo or Mapping the Waters by Marina Warner, taking as its focus representations of femininity and the other, the study scrutinises the various implications of three concepts: ambivalence, liminality and plurality in terms of their relevance to the conjunctures of postfeminism and postcolonialism, proposing that postfeminist discourse is in search of a new ethics and perspective that mainly champion these three terms through the employment of intertextuality as a strategy. The study is careful to carry out a comparative analysis of the works in terms of both poetics and politics, informed by interdisciplinarity. The study explores how The Tempest destabilises itself, inviting a deconstructionist reading in terms of its relation to patriarchal and colonial dynamics ingrained in the play and how Indigo takes its substantial space among other rewritings of The Tempest by presenting new and imaginative ways of seeing the female and feminised figures in the play.

Merchant Ivory Interviews gathers together for the first time interviews made over the past five decades with director James Ivory (b. 1928), producer Ismail Merchant (1936-2005) and screenwriter Ruth Prawer Jhabvala (b. 1927), beginning with their earliest work in India and ending with James Ivory's last film, The City of Your Final Destination (2009). The book traces their career while offering valuable insights into their creative filmmaking process. The volume serves as a corrective to the prevailing critical orthodoxy attached to Merchant Ivory's work, which tends to regard them as being solely concerned with historically accurate costumes and settings. As independent filmmakers, they have developed an idiosyncratic approach that resists facile classification. Merchant Ivory have insisted on maintaining their independence. More importantly, this book shows how Merchant Ivory have always taken considerable care in casting their films, as well as treating actors with respect. This is a deliberate policy designed to bring out one of the triumvirate's principal thematic concerns: running throughout their work, the impact of the clash of cultures on individuals. Partly, this has been inspired by their collective experiences of living and working in different cultures. They do not offer any answers to this issue; rather, they believe that their task is simply to raise awareness, to make filmgoers conscious of the importance of cultural sensitivities that assume paramount significance in any exchange, whether verbal or nonverbal.

Often in literary texts, repetition does not only serve the purpose of re-enforcing a concept but rather the creation of a new meaning. This may be engendered by contrast, gradation and correction. This book explores examples from Homer where repetition is intertwined with the very fabric of early Greek poetry, Virgil and Ovid. An appendix dedicated to irony shows how even this rhetorical figure can be considered a special case of negative repetition. The book also provides a review of recent literature. on neuro cognitive science attesting to how repetition is unavoidably a staple feature of any text
