career but chiefly with respect to its earlier history in one of the daily journals what i have said has been transferred to various newspapers and literary periodicals and in no one instance has the accuracy of a single statement i then made been doubted much less denied it is everywhere believed that the earliest productions from his pen made their appearance in the columns of the morning chronicle and that mr john black then editor of that journal was the first to discover and duly appreciate the genius of mr dickens the fact was not so it is true that he wrote sketches afterwards in the morning

willis almost total textbook analysis of today s newspaper makes surviving in the newspaper business precisely what it claims to be a how to guide to newspaper management in the 1980s and beyond a set of unified principles for successful management it explains the supervision and organization of each department and stresses the importance of keeping the paper responsive to the needs of its readers advertisers and somewhat surprisingly even its employees willis talks about advertising circulation and marketing strategies and how to deal with competition from tv the suburban weeklies and labor unions he looks at the editor as a people manager something that more than one tradition bound editor has been unable to do for himself the book has sample budgets and organizational charts and even a discussion of the relative merits of adult vs youth carriers newspaper research journal professor jim willis book is a nicely condensed overview of the newspaper as a business though it is aimed at journalism students enrolled in newspaper management classes it is also worthwhile reading for the curious reporter or copy editor who knows little about how newspapers make and spend money the book is sprinkled with good common sense about balancing newspapers as a business against newspapering as good journalism professor willis makes a gallant attempt to make sure students understand that though the newspaper must make a profit to survive it will never truly excel unless it produces a good news editorial product asne bulletin surviving in the newspaper business is a how to do it guide to newspaper management for the 1980s and beyond it presents a set of unified principles for successful management and exposes the student to the primary mission of the newspaper to deliver a quality product to the depth and breadth of the marketplace stressing the importance of the total newspaper concept willis portrays the successful newspaper as integrated internally among departments and externally with its readership and advertisers in addition he analyzes the newspaper s industrial environment discusses management survival strategies considers business and finance plans and assesses organizational behavior in the newsroom included are a series of hands on case studies offering further insights into topics discussed between the 1970s and the 1990s american journalists began telling the news by telling stories they borrowed narrative techniques transforming sources into characters events into plots and their own work from stenography to anthropology this was more than a change in style it was a change in substance a paradigmatic shift in terms of what constituted news and how it was being told it was a turn toward narrative journalism and a new culture of news propelled by the storytelling movement thomas schmidt analyzes the expansion of narrative journalism and the corresponding institutional changes in the american newspaper industry in the last quarter of the twentieth century in doing so he offers the first institutionally situated history of narrative journalism s evolution from the new journalism of the 1960s to long form literary journalism in the 1990s based on the analysis of primary sources industry publications and oral history interviews this study traces how narrative techniques developed and spread through newsrooms advanced by institutional initiatives and a growing network of practitioners proponents and writing coaches who mainstreamed the use of storytelling challenging the popular belief that it was only a few talented new york reporters tome wolfe jimmy breslin gay talese joan didion and others who revolutionized journalism by deciding to employ storytelling techniques in their writing schmidt shows that the evolution of narrative in late twentieth century american journalism was more nuanced more purposeful and more institutionally based than the new journalism myth suggests the newspaper is to the twentieth century what the novel was for the nineteenth century the expression of popular sentiment in the first of a three volume study of journalism and what it has meant as a source of knowledge and as a mechanism for orchestrating mass ideology melvin j lasky provides a major overview his research runs the gamut of material found in newspapers from the trivial to the profound from pseudo science to habits of solid investigation the volume is divided into four parts the first attacks deficiencies in grammar and syntax with examples from newspapers and magazines drawn from the german as well as english language press the second examines the key issues of journalism accuracy and authenticity lasky provides an especially acute account of differences between active literacy and passive viewing or the relationship of word and picture in defining authenticity the third part emphasizes the problem of bias in everything from racial reporting to cultural correctness this is the first systematic attempt to study racial nomenclature identity labeling and literary discrimination lasky follows closely the model set by george orwell a half century earlier the final section of the work covers the competition between popular media and the redefinition of pornography and its language the volume closes with an examination of how the popular culture both influenced and was influential upon literary titans like hemingway lawrence and tynan

the newspaper is an essay discussing the merits of newspapers as a publication format to this the author begins his argument as to why it is important to evaluate its merits through the following passage so common an object as a newspaper is seldom the subject of serious reflection if any one of us should stop to consider what it is and why it is made it is odds that he would think chiefly of one aspect of it to the general exclusion of the others the curious man might reflect in surprise on the vast amount of mere reading matter turned out regularly every morning with perhaps only half a dozen literal mistakes on the variety of typesetting and the amount of printing often more than sufficient to make a large sized book the manufacturer would direct his imagination to the efficient machinery necessary to produce perhaps 3 000 copies a minute or to the practiced organization able to distribute them as fast as they are printed the businessman would think chiefly of a newspaper as a vehicle for prices and a medium for advertising cooks butlers clerks and governesses look upon it as a daily registry office the solicitor sells houses and lands through it housewives through it sometimes buy their soaps and more often their hats actors singers authors artists and musicians each read their special column and wonder when the editor intends to engage someone really acquainted with the only subject worth reading the politician will read its leading articles with smirking assent or explosive repudiation last of all comes the general reader and he asks nothing more of his newspaper than all the news of everywhere collected at great cost transcribed with finished skill and presented to him in just the way which pleases and flatters him most all of them have on their lips the daily threat of giving up the paper if they are not scrupulously satisfied
