this selected issues paper discusses reasons behind rise of inflation in philippines the paper focuses on inflation developments and the monetary policy framework in the philippines it employs a global latent factor model to decompose inflation into common drivers and idiosyncratic factors for a sample of 62 countries based on these results it then models inflation in different regions and presents the single country single equation model and conducts out of sample forecasts to determine consistency with the medium term inflation target the common factors modeling of inflation suggests that inflation in the philippines depends on world commodity price developments and movements in the us dollar effective exchange rate however theory suggests that domestic cyclical conditions also matter we assess the importance of these variables by estimating a phillips curve augmented by world commodity prices and the nominal exchange rate for 2000 2013 using the akaike schwartz criterion the optimal lag length is found to be four given the potential for serial correlation and heteroskedasticity we use the newey west standard errors to find the consistent estimates

this paper analyzes the predictability of currency crises the paper evaluates three models for predicting currency crises that were proposed before 1997 two of the models failed to provide useful forecasts one model provides forecasts that are somewhat informative though still not reliable plausible modifications to this model improve its performance providing some hope that future models may do better the study suggests though that although forecasting models may help indicate vulnerability to crises the predictive power of even the best of them may be limited
