the mathematical models of productivity theory allows for the productivity rate of manufacturing machines and systems to be modelled with results that are validated by their actual output this book presents the analytical approaches and methods to define maximal productivity rate of manufacturing machines and systems based on the parameters of technological processes structural design reliability of mechanisms and management systems many approaches have been proposed to solve the problem of finding the optic flow field of an image sequence three major classes of optic flow computation techniques can discriminated see for a good overview beauchemin and barron ibeauchemin19951 gradient based or differential methods phase based or frequency domain methods correlation based or area methods feature point or sparse data tracking methods in this chapter we compute the optic flow as a dense optic flow field with a multi scale differential method the method originally proposed by florack and nielsen florack1998a is known as the multiscale optic flow constrain equation mofce this is a scale space version of the well known computer vision implementation of the optic flow constraint equation as originally proposed by horn and schunck horn1981 this scale space variation as usual consists of the introduction of the aperture of the observation in the process the application to stereo has been described by maas et al maas 1995a maas 1996a of course difficulties arise when structure emerges or disappears such as with occlusion cloud formation etc then knowledge is needed about the processes and objects involved in this chapter we focus on the scale space approach to the local measurement of optic flow as we may expect the visual front end to do 17 2 motion detection with pairs of receptive fields as a biologically motivated start we begin with discussing some neurophysiological findings in the visual system with respect to motion detection collection of the monthly climatological reports of the united states by state or region with monthly and annual national summaries this multi volume series in seven parts is the first english language translation of der weltkrieg the german official history of the first world war originally produced between 1925 and 1944 using classified archival records that were destroyed in the aftermath of the second world war der weltkrieg is the untold story of germany s experience on the western front in the words of its official historians making it vital to the study of the war and official memory in weimar and nazi germany although exciting new sources have recently been uncovered in former soviet archives this work remains the basis of future scholarship it is essential reading for any scholar graduate student or enthusiast of the great war this volume the first of the series to appear in print focuses on 1915 the first year of trench warfare for the first time in the history of warfare poison gas was used against french and canadian troops at ypres meanwhile conflict raged in the german high command over the political and military direction of the war the year 1915 also set the stage for the bloodbath at verdun and sealed the fate of the german supreme commander erich von falkenhayn this is the official version of that story foreword by hew strachan co published with the laurier centre
