this book explores responses to the strangeness and pleasures of modernism and modernity in four commercial british women s magazines of the interwar period through extensive study of interwar vogue uk eve good housekeeping uk and harper s bazaar uk wood uncovers how modernism was received and disseminated by these fashion and domestic periodicals and recovers experimental journalism and fiction within them by an array of canonical and marginalized writers including storm jameson rose macaulay gertrude stein and virginia woolf the book s analysis is attentive to text and image and to interactions between editorial feature and advertising material its detailed survey of these largely neglected magazines reveals how they situated radical aesthetics in relation to modernity s broader new challenges diversions and opportunities for women and how they approached high modernist art and literature through discourses of fashion and celebrity modernism and modernity in british women s magazines extends recent research into modernism s circulation through diverse markets and publication outlets and adds to the substantial body of scholarship concerned with the relationship between modernism and popular culture it demonstrates that commercial women s magazines subversively disrupted and sustained contemporary hierarchies of high and low culture as well as actively participating in the construction of modernism s public profile virginia woolf was a civilian a noncombatant during the great war unlike the war poet wilfred owen she had not seen god through mud yet although she was remembered by her husband as the least political animal since aristotle invented the definition and called an instinctive pacifist by alex zwerdling her experience and memory of the war became a touchstone against which life itself was measured virginia woolf and the great war focuses on woolf s war consciousness and how her sensitivity to representations of war in the popular press and authorized histories affected both the development of characters in her fiction and her nonfictional and personal writings as the seamless history of the prewar world had been replaced by the realities of modern war woolf herself understood there was no immunity from its ravages even for civilians karen l levenback s readings of mrs dalloway to the lighthouse and the years in particular together with her understanding of civilian immunity the operation of memory in the postwar period and lexical resistance to accurate representations of war are profoundly convincing in securing woolf s position as a war novelist and thinker whose insights and writings anticipate our most current progressive theories on war s social effects and continuing presence
