A Society Fit for Human Beings 1997-10-31 a society fit for human beings contends that there is a profound incoherence in the foundations of modern western civilization and that we are on a self destructive course with the quest for wealth and power our dominant concern we find ourselves with a flourishing economy and a supreme military force based on science and technology but with our moral civic and religious culture undermined by our way of comprehending the world our human identity is problematic the wells of meaning that nourish the human spirit are polluted or drying up and the social order is in disarray this situation e m adams argues requires nothing less than a historic cultural revolution based on a shift in priorities from wealth and power to humanistic values those grounded in selfhood and lived experience that are essential for human growth meaningful lives and a healthy society such a shift in our governing values would require a restructuring of our intellectual vision of humankind and the world in terms of humanistic categories those grounded in lived experience the categories of the humanities this book shows the import of such a humanistic cultural revolution for our human identity morality the social order and our major institutions including the family and community education the economy the government the military and religion it outlines how we can work toward such a cultural revolution and develop a constructive postmodern civilization with a society fit for human beings

Understanding Human Society 1960 reproduction of the original history of human society by frank w blackmar

Human Society 1981 in democratic society and human needs noonan examines the moral grounds for liberalism and democracy arguing that contemporary democracy was created through needs based struggles against classical liberal rights which are essentially exclusionary for him a democratic society is one in which human beings collectively control necessary life resources using them to promote the essential human value of free capability realization his critique of globalization and liberal capitalism vindicates radical social and economic democratization and provides an essential step towards understanding the vast discrepancies between rich and poor within and between democratic countries

History of Human Society 2014 economics originated as a branch of the humane studies that was concerned with trying to understand how some societies flourish while others stagnate and also how once flourishing societies could come to stagnate over the major part of the 20th century however economists mostly turned away from these humane and societal concerns by importing mechanistic ideas from 19th century physics this book seeks to show how that original humane and social focus can be renewed the many particular topics the book examines can be traced to two central ideas firstly that economic theory like physics requires two distinct theoretical frameworks one treats qualities that are invariant across time and place this is the domain of equilibrium theory the other treats the internal generation of change in societies through entrepreneurial action that continually transforms the ecology of enterprises that constitutes a society secondly economic theory is treated as a genuine social science and not a science of rationality writ large the book also explores ways in which life in society is understood differently once economics is treated as a social science the book is much of the hyper formality that comprises economic theory these days fails to make reasonable contact with reality it will be of interest to sociologists political scientists and researchers in law public policy austrian economics evolutionary economics institutional economics and political economy

Human Nature and the Social Order 1902 during the last 60 years the discipline of human factors hf has evolved alongside progress in engineering technology and business contemporary hf is clearly shifting towards addressing the human centered design paradigm for much larger and complex societal systems the effectiveness of which is affected by recent advances in engineering science and education human factors of a global society a system of systems perspective explores the future challenges and potential contributions of the human factors discipline in the conceptual age of human creativity and social responsibility written by a team of experts and pioneers this book examines the human aspects related to contemporary societal developments in science engineering and higher education in the context of unprecedented progress in those areas it also discusses new paradigms for higher education including education delivery and administration from a systems of systems perspective it then examines the future challenges and potential contributions of the human factors discipline while there are other books that focus on systems engineering or on a specific area of human factors this book unifies these different perspectives into a holistic point of view it gives you an understanding of human factors as it relates to the global enterprise system and its newly emerging characteristics such as quality system complexity evolving management system and its role in social and behavioral changes by exploring the human aspects related to actual societal developments in science the book opens a new horizon for the hf community

The Human Use of Human Beings 1950 society its origin and development by henry k henry kalloch rowe 1 man and his social relations a study of society starts with the obvious fact that human beings live together the hermit is abnormal however far back we go in the process of human evolution we find the existence of social relations and sociability seems a quality ingrained in human nature every individual has his own personality that belongs to him apart from every other individual but the perpetuation and development of that personality is dependent on relations with other personalities and with the physical environment which limits his activity as an individual his primary interest is in self but he finds by experience that he cannot be independent of others his impulses his feelings and his ideas are due to the relations that he has with that which is outside of himself he may exercise choice but it is within the limits set by these outside relations he may make use of what they can do for him or he may antagonize them at least he cannot ignore them experience determines how the individual may best adapt himself to his environment and adapt the environment to his own needs and he thus establishes certain definite relationships any group of individuals who have thus consciously established relationships with one another and with their social environment is a society the relations through whose channels the interplay of social forces is constantly going on make up the social organization the readjustments of these relations for the better adaptation of one individual to another or of either to their environment make up the process of social development a society which remains in equilibrium is termed static that which is changing is called dynamic 2 the field and the purpose of sociology life in society is the subject matter of sociological study sociology is concerned with the origin and development of that life with its present forms and activities and with their future development it finds its material in the every day experiences of men women and children in whatever stage of progress they may be but for practical purposes its chief interest is in the normal life of civilized communities together with the past developments and future prospects of that life the purpose of sociological study is to discover the active workings and controlling principles of life its essential meaning and its ultimate goal then to apply the principles laws and ideals discovered to the imperfect social process that is now going on in the hope of social betterment 3 source material for study the source material of social life lies all about us for its past history we must explore the primitive conduct of human beings as we learn it from anthropology and archæology or as we infer it from the lowest human races or from animal groups that bear the nearest physical and mental resemblance to mankind we are delighted to publish this classic book as part of our extensive classic library collection many of the books in our collection have been out of print for decades and therefore have not been accessible to the general public the aim of our publishing program is to facilitate rapid access to this vast reservoir of literature and our view is that this is a significant literary work which deserves to be brought back into print after many decades the contents of the vast majority of titles in the classic library have been scanned from the original works to ensure a high quality product each title has been meticulously hand curated by our staff our philosophy has been guided by a desire to provide the reader with a book that is as close as possible to ownership of the original work we hope that you will enjoy this wonderful classic work and that for you it becomes an enriching experience

History of Human Society 2020-07-30 charles horton cooley s account of human beings their behavior and how they organize themselves has been praised for its originality and remains an underappreciated and much cited classic of sociology human nature and the social order is a logically composed book which straddles and to a degree transcends the boundaries between philosophy psychology and sociology cooley wished to clarify the behavior of human beings how they come to interact and socialize with one another and how they arrive at a definition of themselves that is in harmony with their own well being and that of others later in the book cooley discusses qualities which have been promoted or felt as necessary for humans in civilized society good conscientious and beneficent leadership the possession of a moral compass and conscience and the excellent values of freedom receive their own discussions with positive and negative elements comprising the well rounded analyses

Democratic Society and Human Needs 2006 what is a society according to sociologists and philosophers the concept is a self evident one they describe society as an aggregate of people as a society divided into classes or as a community but also as an impossible object why is the answer so vague there is a conceptual wall that stands in the way of a definition of society at the same time as society must be defined in order for the social sciences to be possible human society social theory wholes parts and the field of toleration shows how society can be defined based on philosopher uuno saarnio s logical categories of the whole and the field of toleration through this it is also possible to describe the structure of society and man s action within society this volume argues in favor of a reshaping of the social sciences back cover

Sociology 2015-09-21 we ve been told again and again that life is unfair but what if we re wrong simply to resign ourselves to this situation drawing on the evidence from our evolutionary history and the emergent science of human nature this title shows that we have an innate sense of fairness

□□□□□ 2014-09-10 argues for a humanistic cultural reformation to counter our materialistic values and science dominated intellectual life and shows how this would affect our lives and transform our society a society fit for human beings contends that there is a profound incoherence in the foundations of modern western civilization and that we are on a self destructive course with the quest for wealth and power our dominant concern we find ourselves with a flourishing economy and a supreme military force based on science and technology but with our moral civic and religious culture undermined by our way of comprehending the world our human identity is problematic the wells of meaning that nourish the human spirit are polluted or drying up and the social order is in disarray this situation e m adams argues requires nothing less than a historic cultural revolution based on a shift in priorities from wealth and power to humanistic values those grounded in selfhood and lived experience that
