daemon uth friesard was never meant to be king as the youngest of three royal sons he should have been free to live the life of his choosing it was tragedy that drove him into the role a role he is ill prepared to handle with all the pressures of a kingdom standing at the brink of war weighing down on him daemon follows the advice of his closest friend and arranges a marriage with an enemy princess in the hopes of attaining peace clayden kiel took on the role of high priest at an early age as the kingdom's sole connection to their patron god it's a role he takes very seriously so seriously that a few words written by his former mentor in a journal were enough to push him into distancing himself from the only friend he's ever had his hopes are that daemon's marriage will not only bring peace to the kingdom but give the king someone else to turn to in times of need a greater threat than war with their neighbor is hanging over phalindros and clayden would do anything to keep that threat at bay even turning his back on the most important person in his life but the path to the future is never clear and the gods play at a game mortals cannot hope to understand in the aftermath of the discoveries in foundations of mathematics there was surprisingly little effect on mathematics as a whole if one looks at standard textbooks in different mathematical disciplines especially those closer to what is referred to as applied mathematics there is little trace of those developments outside of mathematical logic and model theory but it seems fair to say that there is a widespread conviction that the principles embodied in the zermelo fraenkel theory with choice zfc are a correct description of the set theoretic underpinnings of mathematics in most textbooks of the kind referred to above there is of course no discussion of these matters and set theory is assumed informally although more advanced principles like choice or sometimes replacement are often mentioned explicitly this implicitly fixes a point of view of the mathematical universe which is at odds with the results in foundations for example most mathematicians still take it for granted that the real number system is uniquely determined up to isomorphism which is a correct point of view as long as one does not accept to look at unnatural interpretations of the membership relation
