Springtime in Noisy Village 2011-05-09 the topic of the book is the focus on rights which has spread like wildfire above all in the western part of the world since the second world war and the impact this way of thinking has had on how we see our fellow human beings the author sees rights focused thinking and neighborly love as opposites and does not think that the two are compatible they are mutually exclusive in other words a different way of thinking is called for and this applies to all the things that we human beings feel we are entitled to and claim starting with the declaration of human rights and continuing to the right to a roof over one s head throughout the chapters of the book the author argues that we human beings do not have any rights at all and how we instead have to take a closer look at the parts of rights focused thinking that might be justified what is the interface of human rights and compassion the various topics are introduced to the reader by a fairytale or a story which is meant to make the reader reflect on the problem before meeting the author s point of view the same way jesus made his followers think about a problem by means of parables what is a human right how can we tell whether a proposed human right is really one how do we establish the content of particular human rights and how do we prevent such rights from harming human relations these are questions that the author tries to answer
