is television dead the classic television era of the 1950s and 1960s characterized by limited choices of programs broadcast on over the air channels to families as if they were seated around a hearth and to a nation as if gathered around a campfire has indeed ended throughout the drastic evolution of this media thousands of studies have examined the short term effects of television such as the evaluation of persuasion campaigns yet there is scant research on the overreaching sociological impacts of television and its centrality to western culture over the past 60 years this compelling volume of the annals is the first collection of rigorous articles devoted to studying ways in which television has impacted our values ideologies institutions social structure and culture over the past few decades scholarly and policy interest in fatherhood and fathering has burgeoned in large part because of profound social changes in women s and men s lives in the last half of the twentieth century however this research has remained largely national in focus with little cross cultural dissemination of knowledge about fathering practices and supportive or constraining social policies this insightful volume presents a transatlantic perspective on fatherhood and fathering comparatively across nation states as well as in individual countries including the united states canada united kingdom and norway exploring the diversity of fatherhood it encompasses differences across social class race and ethnicity age and life course and varied household formations the articles examine young fathers separated and divorced fathers fathers from minority ethnic and immigrant groups working class fathers new fathers gay fathers and fathers of children with special needs readers can gauge the different epochs of fathering over time and explore the tension that fathers may experience between being good financial providers and actively caring for their children authored by leading figures in fathering research from north america europe and scandinavia the multilayered and intriguing articles in this volume of the annals point toward the need for sustainable policy frameworks that enable fathers to be involved in their children s lives in ways that do not include biased assumptions about the expression of that involvement
