the origins and development of the modern american emergency state from pandemic disease to the disasters associated with global warming to cyberattacks today we face an increasing array of catastrophic threats it is striking that despite the diversity of these threats experts and officials approach them in common terms as future events that threaten to disrupt the vital vulnerable systems upon which modern life depends the government of emergency tells the story of how this now taken for granted way of understanding and managing emergencies arose amid the great depression world war ii and the cold war an array of experts and officials working in obscure government offices developed a new understanding of the nation as a complex of vital vulnerable systems they invented technical and administrative devices to mitigate the nation s vulnerability and organized a distinctive form of emergency government that would make it possible to prepare for and manage potentially catastrophic events through these conceptual and technical inventions stephen collier and andrew lakoff argue vulnerability was defined as a particular kind of problem one that continues to structure the approach of experts officials and policymakers to future emergencies

the american economy faces two deep problems expanding innovation and raising the rate of quality job creation both have roots in a neglected problem the resistance of legacy economic sectors to innovation while the u s has focused its policies on breakthrough innovations to create new economic frontiers like information technology and biotechnology most of its economy is locked into legacy sectors defended by technological economic political social paradigms that block competition from disruptive innovations that could challenge their models americans like to build technology covered wagons and take them out west to open new innovation frontiers we don t head our wagons back east to bring innovation to our legacy sectors by failing to do so the economy misses a major opportunity for innovation which is the bedrock of u s competitiveness and its standard of living technological innovation in legacy sectors uses a new unifying conceptual framework to identify the shared features underlying structural obstacles to innovation in major legacy sectors energy air and auto transport the electric power grid buildings manufacturing agriculture health care delivery and higher education and develops approaches to understand and transform them it finds both strengths and obstacles to innovation in the national innovation environments a new concept that combines the innovation system and the broader innovation context for a group of asian and european economies manufacturing is a major legacy sector that presents a particular challenge because it is a critical stage in the innovation process by increasingly offshoring production the u s is losing important parts of its innovation capacity innovate here produce here where the u s took all the gains of its strong innovation system at every stage is being replaced by innovate here produce there which threatens to lead to produce there innovate there to bring innovation to legacy sectors authors william bonvillian and charles weiss recommend that policymakers focus on all stages of innovation from research through implementation they should fill institutional gaps in the innovation system and take measures to address structural obstacles to needed disruptive innovations in the specific case of advanced manufacturing the production ecosystem can be recreated to reverse jobless innovation and add manufacturing led innovation to the u s s still strong research oriented innovation system
