as the humanities in higher education struggle with a jobs crisis and declining enrollments the travails of english have been especially acute and long standing no scholar has analyzed the discipline s contradictions as authoritatively as john guillory whose 1993 book cultural capital the problem of literary canon formation remains a classic and whose subsequent essays on the profession of literary study have been widely cited in this much anticipated new book guillory shows how literary study has been organized both historically and in the modern era both before and after its professionalization the traces of this volatile history he shows have solidified into permanent features of the university yet the discipline continues to be troubled by the relation between discipline and profession both in its ambivalence about the literary object and in its anxious embrace of a professionalism that betrays the discipline s relation to its amateur precursor criticism in a series of essays several previously unpublished guillory unpacks what it means to profess criticism his book gives a timely and incisive explanation for the perennial churn in literary study the constant revolutionizing of its methods and objects and the permanent crisis of its professional identification it closes with a robust outline of five key rationales for literary study offering a credible account of the aims of the discipline and a reminder to the professoriate of what they already do and

often do well

recognition is often considered a means to de escalate conflicts and promote peaceful social interactions this volume explores the forms that social recognition and its withholding may take in asymmetric armed conflicts examining the risks and opportunities that arise when local state and transnational actors recognise misrecognise or deny recognition of armed non state actors by studying key asymmetric conflicts through the prism of recognition it offers an innovative perspective on the interactions between armed non state actors and state actors in what contexts does granting recognition to armed non state actors foster conflict transformation what happens when governments withhold recognition or label armed non state actors in ways they perceive as misrecognition the authors examine the ambivalence of recognition processes in violent conflicts and their sometimes unintended consequences the volume shows that while non recognition prevents conflict transformation the recognition of armed non state actors may produce counterproductive precedents and new modes of exclusion in intra state and transnational politics in this bold interdisciplinary work geoffrey galt harpham argues that asceticism has played a major role in shaping western ideas of the body writing ethics and aesthetics he suggests that we consider the ascetic as the cultural element in culture and presents a close analysis of works by athanasius augustine matthias grünewald nietzsche foucault and other thinkers as proof of the extent of asceticism s resources harpham demonstrates the usefulness of his findings by deriving from asceticism a discourse of resistance a code of interpretation ultimately more generous and humane than those currently available to us
