the uses of fiction in early modern europe are far more varied than is often assumed by those who consider fiction to be synonymous with the novel the contributors to this volume demonstrate the significant role that fiction plays in early modern european culture not only in a variety of its literary genres but also in its formation of philosophical ideas political theories and the law the volume explores these uses of fiction in a series of interrelated case studies ranging from the italian renaissance to the french revolution and examining the work of among others montaigne corneille descartes hobbes locke and diderot it asks where does fiction live and thrive under what conditions and to what ends it suggests that fiction is best understood not as a genre or a discipline but instead as a frontier one that demarcates literary genres and disciplines of knowledge and which crucially allows for the circulation of ideas between them
