Balloon Flying Handbook (FAA-H-8083-11A) 1993

this book investigates the syntax and usage of fragments morgan 1973 apparently subsentential utterances like a coffee please which fulfill the same communicative function as the corresponding full sentence i d like to have a coffee please even though such utterances are frequently used they challenge the central role that has been attributed to the notion of sentence in linguistic theory particularly from a semantic perspective the first part of the book is dedicated to the syntactic analysis of fragments which is investigated with experimental methods currently there are several competing theoretical analyses of fragments which rely almost only on introspective data the experiments presented in this book constitute a first systematic evaluation of some of their crucial predictions and taken together support an in situ ellipsis account of fragments as has been suggested by reich 2007 the second part of the book addresses the questions of why fragments are used at all and under which circumstances they are preferred over complete sentences syntactic accounts impose licensing conditions on fragments but they do not explain why fragments are sometimes dis preferred provided that their usage is licensed this book proposes an information theoretic account of fragments which predicts that the usage of fragments is constrained by a general tendency to distribute processing effort uniformly across the utterance with respect to fragments this leads to two predictions which are empirically confirmed speakers tend towards omitting predictable words and they insert additional redundancy before unpredictable words

Experimental investigations on the syntax and usage of fragments 2012

this is a new contribution to a theory of reiteration in natural languages with a special focus on creoles reiteration is meant to denote any situation where the same form occurs at least twice within the boundaries of some linguistic domain by including two case studies bearing on hebrew and breton alongside five chapters on creole languages surinam creole haitian mauritian são tomé and pitchi this volume brings counter evidence to the claim that reiteration phenomena are particularly typical of creoles and by exploring the syntax of reiteration alongside its morphology the authors are led to challenge the iconic theory of reduplication proposed in several other studies of similar phenomena this volume will be relevant for creole studies but also for readers more generally interested in language universals and the architecture of grammars
