discursive factors in language acquisition cross linguistic relationships and variation wide ranging and engaging selves in question considers the various ways in which auto biographical accounts situate and question the self in contemporary southern africa the twenty seven interviews presented here consider both the ontological status and the representation of the self they remind us that the self is constantly under construction in webs of interlocution and that its status and representation are always in question the contributors therefore look at ways in which auto biographical practices contribute to placing understanding and troubling the self and selves in postcolonies in the current global constellation they examine topics such as the contexts conducive to production processes the contents and forms of auto biographical accounts and finally their impact on the producers and the audience in doing so they map out a multitude of variables including the specific historical juncture geo political locations social positions cultures languages generations and genders in their relations to auto biographical practices those interviewed include the famous and the hardly known women and men writers and performers who communicate in a variety of languages afrikaans english xhosa isizulu sesotho and yiddish an extensive introduction offers a general framework on drawing on teh gret tradition of the locked room detective story tim couzens sets out eighty years after the event to solve the crime this book covers different aspects of speech and language pathology and it offers a fairly comprehensive overview of the complexity and the emerging importance of the field by identifying and re examining from different perspectives a number of standard assumptions in clinical linguistics and in cognitive sciences the papers encompass different issues in phonetics phonology syntax semantics and pragmatics discussed with respect to deafness stuttering child acquisition and impairments sli william s syndrome deficit fluent aphasia and agrammatism the interdisciplinary complexity of the language cognition interface is also explored by focusing on empirical data from different languages bantu catalan dutch english german greek hebrew italian japanese and spanish the aim of this volume is to stress the growing importance of the theoretical and methodological linguistic tools developed in this area to bring under scrutiny assumptions taken for granted in recent analyses which may not be so obvious as they may seem to investigate how even apparently minimal choices in the description of phenomena may affect the form and complexity of the language cognition interface much of the work currently conducted within the framework of universal grammar and language learnability focuses on the acquisition of syntax however the learnability issues are just as applicable to the domain of phonology this volume is the first to gather research that assumes a sophisticated phonological framework and considers the implications of this framework for language acquisition both first and second as such this book truly deals with phonological acquisition rather than phonetic acquisition for the thirty third consecutive year the annual conference on african linguistics acal has provided the major forum for the discussion of linguistic data geared towards understanding how african languages are constituted acquired and used this volume represents a selection of 25 peer reviewed papers from the 33rd awal held in march 2002 at ohio university in athens the papers cover language acquisition syntax phonetics phonology morphology historical linguistics as well as language use and function in africa the twenty one papers that make up this volume reflect the broad perspective of african linguistic typology studies today where previous volumes would present language material from a very restricted area and perspective the present contributions reflect the global interest and orientation of current african linguistic studies the studies are nearly all implicational in nature based upon a detailed survey of a particular linguistic phenomenon in a given language or language area conclusions are drawn about the general nature about this phenomenon in the languages of africa and beyond they represent as such a first step that may ultimately lead to a more thorough understanding of african linguistic structures this approach is well justified taking the other road attempting to pick out linguistic details from often fairly superficially documented languages runs the risk that the data and its implications for the structure investigated might be misunderstood consequentially only very few studies of this nature giving the very broad perspective the overview of a particular structure type covering the whole african continent are represented here proceedings of the annual meeting of the society in v 1 11 1925 34 after 1934 they appear in its bulletin major new work arguing that grammars are profoundly shaped by language processing the three concepts of case valency and transitivity belong to the most discussed topics of modern linguistics on the one hand they are crucially connected with morphological aspects of the clause including case marking person agreement and voice on the other hand they are related to several semantic issues such as the meaning of case semantico syntactic verbal classes and the semantic correlates of transitivity the volume unifies papers written within different theoretical frameworks and representing variegated approaches optimality theory government and binding various versions of the functional approach cross linguistic and typological analyses containing both numerous new findings in individual languages and valuable observations and generalizations related to case valency and transitivity due to significant political and social changes over the last decade in their countries and worldwide many scholars in the nordic nations and in southern africa have been researching on music and identity an area with a paucity of literature it is our hope that this book will be beneficial to scholars interested in the field of music and identity this volume is the result of the swedish south african research network ssarn project funded from 2004 2006 by the swedish international development cooperation agency sida and the national research foundation nrf of south africa under the theme music and identity ssarn was founded by stig magnus thorsén of the university of gothenburg sweden in 2002 when he invited nordic and southern african scholars to participate in a research group focusing broadly on the topic music and identity publisher s website this much awaited volume uncovers the long lost pages of the major african multilingual newspaper abantu batho founded in 1912 by african national congress anc convenor pixley seme with assistance from the swazi queen it was published up until 1931 attracting the cream of african politicians journalists and poets mqhayi nontsisi mgqweth and grendon in its pages burning issues of the day were articulated alongside cultural by ways the people s paper comprising both essays and an anthology explores the complex movements and individuals that emerged in the almost twenty years of its publication the essays contribute rich new material to provide clearer insights into south african politics and intellectual life the anthology unveils a judicious selection of never before published columns from the paper spanning every year of its life and drawn from repositories on three continents abantu batho had a regional and international focus and by examining all these dynamics across boundaries and disciplines the people s paper transcends established historiographical frontiers to fill a lacuna that scholars have long lamented although grammatical agreement or concord is widespread in human languages linguistic theorists have generally treated agreement phenomena as secondary or even marginal all the papers in this volume however take agreement phenomena seriously as presenting either a general issue in theory construction or a descriptive problem in particular types of languages the theoretical perspectives range from purportedly theory neutral typological frameworks to assumptions about the validity of one or another current formal model further the degree of generality ranges from a universalist nature of human language agenda to concern with one or another aspect of grammatical agreement or with agreement in a single language or language group gender and language in sub saharan africa tradition struggle and change is the first book to bring together the topics of language and gender african languages and gender in african contexts and it does so in a descriptive explanatory and critical way including fascinating new work and new often challenging data from botswana chad ghana kenya nigeria and south africa this collection looks at some traditional uses of language in relation to the gender of its speakers and the gendered nature of the languages themselves it also identifies and explores social change in terms of both gender and sexuality as reflected in and constructed by language and discourse the contributions to this volume are accessibly written and will be of interest to students and established academics working on african sociolinguistics and discourse as well as those whose interest is language gender and sexuality this landmark volume is the first work specifically designed to explore the extent to which striking surface morpho syntactic similarities between bantu and romance languages actually represent similar syntactic structures in particular it explores the timely and much debated issues of verbal morphology and agreement the structure of dps and word order information structure with the goal of providing a better understanding of the structure of the different languages investigated and the implications this holds for syntactic theory more generally all of the papers draw on data from both bantu and romance languages providing a framework for much needed further comparative research on the nature of linguistic structure its diversity and constraints and the implications this has for learnability acquisition the volume also provides an important precedent for incorporating insights from bantu linguistic structure into mainstream of syntax research this volume presents a catalogue of over 2000 doctoral theses by africans in all fields of mathematics including applied mathematics mathematics education and history of mathematics the introduction contains information about distribution by country institutions period and by gender about mathematical
