written in accessible language law and the wearing of religious symbols is a comprehensive analysis of a topical subject that is being widely debated across europe the book provides an overview of emerging case law from the european court of human rights as well as from national courts and equality bodies in european countries on the wearing of religious symbols in educational settings the author persuasively argues that bans on the wearing of religious symbols in educational institutions in Europe constitutes a breach of an individual's human rights and contravenes existing anti-discrimination legislation. The book offers a discussion of developments in Europe, including the French ban on Islamic head scarves which came into force in April 2011. In addition to an in-depth examination of recent bans, the book also assesses the arguments used for imposing them, as well as the legal claims that can potentially be made to challenge their validity. In doing this, the book will go beyond merely analysing the bans in place to suggest ways in which educational institutions can most fairly respond to requests for accommodation of the wearing of religious symbols, and whether perhaps the adoption of other provisions or measures are necessary in order to improve the present situation. This book will be of particular interest to students and academics in the disciplines of law, human rights, political science, sociology, and education, but will also be of considerable value to policy makers and educators as well.

Explore the web of factors that influence your power as a teacher and how you can better use that power to foster student agency and empowerment. What kind of power do teachers have? What influences their instructional decision making and how does that affect students, particularly Black students and other students of color? How can educators move away from practices that oppress and devalue students to practices that support and empower them? These are just a few of the questions that author Tanji Reed Marshall answers in Understanding Your Instructional Power. Countering the notion that teachers are powerless in the classroom, she introduces the Power Principle to help teachers unpack how they understand and use the power associated with their authority and responsibility as an educator. Drawing from her own experience as a classroom teacher and coach, Reed Marshall explains how the Power Principle reveals itself through various elements, including language use by both students and teachers, hidden curriculum, and classroom culture. She identifies four levels of curricular autonomy that teachers have: unfettered, calibrated, restricted, and minimal, and four dimensions of instructional power that characterize their classroom environment: empowering, agentive, protective, and disenfranchising. Reflection exercises throughout the book guide readers through a deep analysis of their personal and professional histories and ideologies, including how these influence students' learning experiences. Reed Marshall shares her own journey of setbacks and progress as she offers support and encouragement to K-12 teachers seeking to use their power in productive ways so that all students can bring their full selves to class and receive the education they deserve. a goal of mine ever since becoming an educational researcher has been to help construct a sound theory to guide instructional practice for far too long educational practice has suffered because we have lacked firm instructional guidelines which in my view should be based on sound psychological theory which in turn should be based on sound neurological theory in other words teachers need to know how to teach and that how to teach should be based solidly on how people learn and how their brains function as you will see in this book my answer to the question of how people learn is that we all learn by spontaneously generating and testing ideas idea generating involves analogies and testing requires comparing predicted consequences with actual consequences we learn this way because the brain is essentially an idea generating and testing machine but there is more to it than this the very process of generating and testing ideas results not only in the construction of ideas that work i e the learning of useful declarative knowledge but also in improved skill in learning i e the development of improved procedural knowledge
