meet the people who design the algorithms that capture our musical tastes the people who make music recommender systems have lofty goals they want to broaden listeners horizons and help obscure musicians find audiences taking advantage of the enormous catalogs offered by companies like spotify apple music and pandora but for their critics recommender systems seem to embody all the potential

harms of algorithms they flatten culture into numbers they normalize ever broadening data collection and they profile their users for commercial ends drawing on years of ethnographic fieldwork anthropologist nick seaver describes how the makers of music recommendation navigate these tensions how product managers understand their relationship with the users they want to help and to capture how scientists conceive of listening itself as a kind of data processing and how engineers imagine the geography of the world of music as a space they care for and control computing taste rehumanizes the algorithmic systems that shape our world drawing attention to the people who build and maintain them in this vividly theorized book seaver brings the thinking of programmers into conversation with the discipline of anthropology opening up the cultural world of computation in a wide ranging exploration that travels from cosmology to calculation myth to machine learning and captivation to care the record of each copyright registration listed in the catalog includes a description of the work copyrighted and data relating to the copyright claim the name of the copyright claimant as given in the application for registration the copyright date the copyright registration number etc in its 114th year billboard remains the world s premier weekly music publication and a diverse digital events brand content and data licensing platform billboard publishes the most trusted charts and offers unrivaled reporting about the latest music video gaming media digital and mobile entertainment issues and trends new york magazine was born in 1968 after a run as an insert of the new york herald tribune and quickly made a place for itself as the trusted resource for readers across the country with award winning writing and photography covering everything from politics and food to theater and fashion the magazine s consistent mission has been to

The Wire 2006 https://www.thewire.com/2006/05/29/algorithmic-culture/
The Wire's 2006 article "Algorithmic Culture" explores the impact of algorithms on culture and society. It discusses how algorithms are used to recommend music, movies, and products, and how they can create a sense of a personalized, curated world. The article also touches on the potential for algorithms to flatten culture and reduce diversity.

Billboard 1961-05-29 meet the people who design the algorithms that capture our musical tastes the people who make music recommender systems have lofty goals they want to broaden listeners horizons and help obscure musicians find audiences taking advantage of the enormous catalogs offered by companies like spotify apple music and pandora but for their critics recommender systems seem to embody all the potential harms of algorithms they flatten culture into numbers they normalize ever broadening data collection and they profile their users for commercial ends drawing on years of ethnographic fieldwork anthropologist nick seaver describes how the makers of music recommendation navigate these tensions how product managers understand their relationship with the users they want to help and to capture how scientists conceive of listening itself as a kind of data processing and how engineers imagine the geography of the world of music as a space they care for and control computing taste rehumanizes the algorithmic systems that shape our world drawing attention to the people who build and maintain them in this vividly theorized book seaver brings the thinking of programmers into conversation with the discipline of anthropology opening up the cultural world of computation in a wide ranging exploration that travels from cosmology to calculation myth to machine learning and
