astonishes itself anxious incredulity replaces intellectual torpor and a puzzled public strains its antennae in every possible direction desperately seeking explanations for the causes and nature of what just hit it 2008 was such a moment not only did the financial system collapse and send the real economy into a tailspin but it also revealed the great gulf separating economics from a very real capitalism modern political economics has a single aim to help readers make sense of how 2008 came about and what the post 2008 world has in store the book is divided into two parts the first part delves into every major economic theory from aristotle to the present with a determination to discover clues of what went wrong in 2008 the main finding is that all economic theory is inherently flawed any system of ideas whose purpose is to describe capitalism in mathematical or engineering terms leads to inevitable logical inconsistency an inherent error that stands between us and a decent grasp of capitalist reality the only scientific truth about capitalism is its radical indeterminacy a condition which makes it impossible to use science s tools e g calculus and statistics to second guess it the second part casts embedded systems

this book is a philosophical critique of the economics of climate change from both an ethical and philosophy of economics perspective mitigating climate change is not so much a scientific problem but rather a political social and above all an economic problem a future without greenhouse gas emissions requires a radical transformation towards a sustainable low carbon economy and society how this transformation could be achieved raises numerous economic questions many of these questions remain untouched although economists are equipped with a suitable toolkit and expertise this book argues that economists have a social responsibility to carry out more research on how global warming could be stopped and that ultimately economic analysis of climate change must be a political economic approach that
