This volume presents foundational and representative essays of the last half century on theatre performance practice during the period 1580 to 1750. The particular focus is on the nature of playing spaces, staging, acting, and audience response in professional theatre, and the selection of previously published research articles and book chapters includes significant works on topics such as Shakespearean staging, French and Spanish theatre audiences, the challenging aspects of the evolution of Italian Renaissance acting practice, and the hidden dimensions of performance. The essays provide coherent transnational coverage as well as detailed treatments of their individual topics: considerations of theatre practice in Italy, Spain, and France, as well as England, place Shakespeare's theatre in its European context to reveal surprising commonalities and salient differences in the performance practice of early modern Europe's major professional theatres. This volume is an indispensable reference work for university libraries, lecturers, researchers, and practitioners, and offers a coherent overview of early modern comparative performance practice and a deeper understanding of the field's major topics and developments.
