this book is a product of necessity during the early days of the covid 19 pandemic that hit the united kingdom quite hard in the second quarter of 2020 schools were ordered to close by the british government during this time finding regular arithmetic practice material in hard paper format for the most part was tricky and expensive especially once one considers the cost of printing paper tones and ink cartridges although some material was available in pdf format to print at home which i was incredibly grateful for i could also never find any extensive bank of practice material i always believe practice makes perfect so when planning home learning i always like to ensure an ample supply of exercise material so i set about creating a microsoft excel based solution this is my normal approach to most of life s challenges so this body of work that you have here is entirely the product of an elaborate excel document every question here has been randomly generated and answers calculated by ms excel herself i find this approach to generating math problems particularly appropriate for this use case the content is therefore necessarily random and somewhat repetitive the only variance is that i have ensured that none of the subtractions yield a negative answer this is because all the material is set out for a mixed ability user group aimed firmly at students of year 1 and 2 the name of the game here is repetition this builds confidence and fluency in the most basic arithmetic operations of addition and subtraction a key skill that will no doubt serve its user for life
