black power at work chronicles the history of direct action campaigns to open up the construction industry to black workers in the 1960s and 1970s the book s case studies of local movements in brooklyn newark the bay area detroit chicago and seattle show how struggles against racism in the construction industry shaped the emergence of black power politics outside the u s south in the process community control of the construction industry especially government war on poverty and post rebellion urban reconstruction projects became central to community organizing for black economic self determination and political autonomy the history of black power s community organizing tradition shines a light on more recent debates about job training and placement for unemployed underemployed and underrepresented workers politicians responded to black power protests at federal construction projects by creating modern affirmative action and minority set aside programs in the late 1960s and early 1970s but these programs relied on voluntary compliance by contractors and unions government enforcement was inadequate and they were not connected to jobs programs forty years later the struggle to have construction jobs serve as a pathway out of poverty for inner city residents remains an unfinished part of the struggle for racial justice and labor union reform in the united states
