Militant Lactivism? 2013-03-01

following networks of mothers in london and paris the author profiles the narratives of women who breastfeed their children to full term typically a period of several years as part of an attachment parenting philosophy these mothers talk about their decision to continue breastfeeding as the natural thing to do evolutionarily appropriate scientifically best and what feels right in their hearts through a theoretical focus on knowledge claims and accountability the author frames these accounts within a wider context of intensive parenting arguing that parenting practices infant feeding in particular have become a highly moralized affair for mothers practices which they feel are a critical aspect of their identity work the book investigates why how and with what implications some of these mothers describe themselves as militant lactivists and reflects on wider parenting culture in the uk and france discussing gender feminism and activism this study contributes to kinship and family studies by exploring how relatedness is enacted in conjunction to constructions of the self

Breastfeeding and Media 2014-01-28

this book centers on the role of media in shaping public perceptions of breastfeeding drawing from magazines doctors office materials parenting books television websites and other media outlets katherine a foss explores how historical and contemporary media often undermine breastfeeding efforts with formula marketing and narrow portrayals of nursing women and their experiences foss argues that the media s messages play an integral role in setting the standard of public knowledge and attitudes toward breastfeeding as she traces shifting public perceptions of breastfeeding and their corresponding media constructions from the development of commercial formula through contemporary times this analysis demonstrates how attributions of blame have negatively impacted public health approaches to breastfeeding thus confronting the misperception that breastfeeding and the failure to breastfeed rests solely on the responsibility of an individual mother
