on jizi's practice significantly contributing to the growing body of scholarship on the continuing vitality of the ink wash tradition in the global contemporary art world. Wenny Teo, the Courtauld Institute of Art, through an in-depth study of the ink painting practice of contemporary Chinese artist Jizi, the authors discover Chinese ink painting's philosophical perspectives, cosmic foundations, and contemporary possibilities. They also uncovered a way to enter into the artist's rich and profound spiritual world through Jizi's expansive visual patterning and refined spiritual imagery. He activates a long and great cultural tradition. Yu Yang, Central Academy of Fine Arts.

Proceedings 1990. The Warburg Institute, founded in the 1920s in Hamburg by art and cultural historian Aby Warburg, is a pioneering institution that has greatly shaped the fields of art, myth, religion, medicine, philosophy, and intellectual history. When in 1933 the institute was moved to London to escape the Nazis, its research and legacy were protected and further developed by a network of researchers dispersed throughout the UK, the US, and Canada. The first interdisciplinary study of the Warburg network as an arena of intellectual transmission, transformation, and exchange, this volume reveals the dynamics, agencies, and actors at play in the development of the Warburg Institute's program and output, with a specific focus on the role of Raymond Klibansky (1905–2005) in the Institute's major ventures. Among these collective projects of the Institute are the famous Saturn and Melancholy, which blends art history with philosophical and cultural history, and the Latin and Arabic Corpus Platonicum Medii Aevi series, which contributed to research on the continuity of Platonic thought. Consulting published and unpublished sources, including correspondences, memories, and diaries of affiliated scholars, the essays explore the history of the Warburg Library as a vital cultural institution and the personal and intellectual relationships of the researchers devoted to it, from Hamburg to London to Montreal. Raymond Klibansky and the Warburg Library network takes readers on a journey into more than forty years of intellectual life at one of the most prestigious cultural research institutes. Contributors include Philippe Despoix (Université de Montréal), Georges Leroux (UQAM), Eric Méchoulan (Université de Montréal), Elisabeth Otto (Université de Montréal), Elizabeth Sears (University of Michigan), Davide Stimilli (University of Colorado at Boulder), Jillian Tomm (Université de Montréal), Martin Treml (Zentrum für Literatur und Kulturforschung, Berlin), Jean-Philippe Uzel (UQAM), Regina Weber (DLA Marbach), Claudia Wedepohl (The Warburg Institute, London), and Graham Whitaker (Glasgow University).

Jizi and His Art in Contemporary China 2015-02-12. Since at least the early sixth century CE, ink rubbings of stone, metal, clay tiles, and wood inscriptions and pictorial images have been used in China to make precise copies of culturally valued material. These paper copies, sometimes all that remain of original works that have become illegible through erosion or that have been destroyed by war or development, or have been rendered inaccessible through events such as flooding resulting from dam construction, Chinese rubbing techniques are used throughout East Asia to create copies that often also are prized in themselves as works of art. Despite the primary importance of this technology to history, art, archaeology, printing, and many other fields of knowledge, black tigers is the first comprehensive study of rubbings in a western language and as such will be welcomed by both scholars and collectors in black tigers kenneth starr recounts what he has seen and learned in fifty years of fascination with rubbings and travels to china in search of the early inscriptions from which they came the book is a history of rubbings a guide to connoisseurship and a technical handbook on the materials and techniques used to make rubbings now readers of english with the author as their affable guide can gain rich insight into a rigorous discipline of classical scholarship the way in which traditional scholars viewed their world and some of the exquisite subtleties of chinese high culture and connoisseurship black tigers will be an essential resource for students of chinese art history calligraphy archaeology and the history of printing
