made by noting the relative frequencies of occurrence of the various color names it should be obvious that such a criterion is dangerous if depended upon too confidently in a study of the expressive powers of colors the present subject is introduced here chiefly for the purpose of emphasizing the danger of placing too riiuch value upon information from this source it is reasonable to suppose that the color names in the vocabularies of primitive beings indicate in a general manner the more powerful colors however these are known through other sources including ordinary observation so that such evidence is at best only corroborative the limitations of interpretations from this source are due among other reasons to the incompleteness of knowledge regarding the colorvision of these primitives and the influence of mental growth in the case of the child there are many thousands of different colors distinguishable by an adult at the present time in fact in a broad sense wherein grays are considered as colors the number of different color sensations that can be experienced is perhaps several hundred thousand it is not surprising that the immature or primitive intellect only comprehends a few of these and it is reasonable to suppose that the most striking colors will be recognized first the finer feeling toward colors that is the recognition of their beauty depends largely upon the taste of the beholder and taste according to civilized standards is black and blue the color of love you ask yourself how do these colors relate to love for many these are the only colors of love they know these are the colors of the wounds left from a battleground where the only expression of love is through a fist of abusive words they are symbolic of a life of violence darkening the soul and discoloring the flesh louise a college student at cal state san bernadino worked two jobs but always found time to participate in a few extra curricular activities where men were concerned she had a history of falling for the underdog usually handsome men but were coined losers but she was always able to see the kindness in their hearts under the masks they wore and save me signs on their foreheads underneath the tough exterior louise presented to the world all she longed for was to be loved accepted and needed by someone special she used whatever she could get her hands on as a means to fill her emptiness larry was no exception but in the end it was louise who needed to be saved she encountered him in a bar late one evening in december 1990 he was a blast from her past their paths had not crossed for years his sign was displayed in neon which hooked her instantly she sauntered over to where he was sitting and reacquainted herself with him she then proceeded to get his phone number before they parted that evening she telephoned him several weeks later and from that day forward her life took an unexpected turn louise s world quickly dissolved and became his world they laughed cried fought made love and partied together as her love intensified the need to save him from himself became her primary purpose then the beatings began louise moved in with larry and the spiral into darkness and despair became the evident path the abuse was frequent usually every few days he laced her food with pcp and for days she teetered on the brink of sanity sometimes stepping with both feet in the world of the insane love and hate melded together in a synonymous feeling for her towards larry she managed to find a glimmer of light and strength in a world she had come to believe impermeable to anything other than the microcosm that had been created with larry on november 15 1991 she took a stand for the only person she could help herself a shattered shell of a women laid at her feet from the debris and wreckage arose a child determined angry and fighting to be free i write this book not only for myself but for every person who may find themselves in volatile situations unable to see away to change their circumstances there is a way to create a life filled with joy
