The "I" of the Beholder 2007

Dr. Alison Cook uncovers the conflicting thoughts and emotions that keep us stuck and teaches us how to name, tame, and transform them into clear solutions that help us move forward in confidence. We all want to live godly lives and navigate through the issues that arise with confidence, but so often we find ourselves wrestling with conflicting thoughts and feelings. I want to be a good daughter, but I can't trust my parent; I should pray more, but I'm frustrated with God. Instead of naming these thoughts and working through them, we try to force ourselves to act based on what we've been told, but this inevitably ends with us feeling stuck, trapped between the people we think we should be and the way we really feel. What if this sidelining of our own thoughts and feelings is what's keeping us stuck? Building on psychological and spiritual insight, Dr. Alison Cook guides us through a practical strategy for acknowledging the tension and seeing the fuller truth. She shows us how to uncover the mixed emotions that keep us confused, distinguish fact from fiction in our relationships, make decisions that account for the entirety of a situation, and start getting honest with ourselves, God, and other people. As we learn to take a step back from our mixed emotions and see the fuller picture of the challenges we face, we stop feeling paralyzed and start seeing our way through the haze, moving forward with clarity and confidence.

Midwifing a womanist approach to pastoral counseling, investigating the fractured self, slavery, violence, and the Black woman is an investigation of intergenerational trauma exploring the impact of slavery, violence, racism, sexism, classism, and other isms on the self of the Black woman. This examination of the complexity of pain speaks to the multidimensional reality of some Black women and the necessity for a therapeutic technique that invites the fullness of the Black woman's historical narrative. Dr. Thurmond Malone's work exposes hidden pain in a safe and sacred space that speaks to the deep-rooted anguish experienced through generations of Black women and invites her readers to understand the necessity for a rebirthing to occur. This work also empowers women of African descent to become unarmored through the naming, claiming, and reauthoring of their story and empowers therapists to become midwives adept at empathizing with the intense pain carried by some Black women. Lastly, the book provides clinicians with insight into how to become midwives capable of holding the accounts of Black women while illustrating the author's approach as a method of interdependence, communal, and cultural competency, taking an analytical look at the counselee's past, then births hope for their future as a whole and transformative self.

In this romance by the New York Times bestselling author Texas Spitfire Erica Wakefield, truly believes her torrid past is behind her and that she's finally escaped her self-destructive ways. She's now a stable businesswoman who's accepted a proposal of marriage from the perfect man. Forest Granger is handsome, rich, and generous, so why does Erica still quiver at the thought of her estranged husband, the impossibly arrogant and sensual Rafael de la Torres, and the incendiary passion that nearly ruined her? When Erica has to find Rafael and make him sign the divorce papers, she runs the risk that he'll arouse more than the memories that still ignite a fever in her blood. Now amid the magnificent beaches of Acapulco and its soul-stirring sunsets, Rafael is back in Erica's life. He's making her feel reckless again, uninhibited, rebellious, and so close to destroying the sweet promise of true love.
