one rainy afternoon sixth grader philip gerard sat down and made a list of ten things he wanted to do go to alaska write a book sail the ocean and so forth a virtual outline of a life the legendary writer would check off most items during his lifetime some many times over but number ten remained elusive a quest unfulfilled make a record album gerard had only been learning to play his first instrument the guitar

when he made the list song writing was well in his future yet he knew why this quest called him i couldn't imagine a fuller expression of my own identity than putting words with music of making a record in every sense of the word of the songs in my head even before i had ever written any songs this seemed true years passed and his experiences added up country wide travels books and more books literary honors piled on top of one another teaching and mentorships songs and more songs gigs and more gigs half a century after jotting down his list he would begin the album of a lifetime he and a cadre of top musicians headed into the studio and on tour with fifteen of his songs the acclaimed american anthem emerged so too would this memoir of how it all happened how life happened written shortly before his passing it is in a sense not one book but three gerard has left us the story of an album the story of a literary life and the inspiring story of a dream finally made real
