if pacifists are correct in thinking that war is always unjust then it follows that we ought to eliminate the possibility and temptation of ever engaging in it we should not build war making capacity and if we already have then demilitarization or military abolition would seem to be the appropriate course to take on the other hand if war is sometimes justified as many believe then it must be permissible to prepare for it by creating and maintaining a military establishment yet this view that the justifiability of war making is also sufficient to justify war building is mistaken this book addresses questions of jus ante bellum or justice before war under what circumstances is it justifiable for a polity to prepare for war by militarizing when if ever and why if at all is it morally permissible to create and maintain the potential to wage war in doing so it highlights the ways in which a civilian population compromises its own security in maintaining a permanent military establishment explores the moral and social costs of militarization and evaluates whether or not these costs are worth bearing
