1 the semiotic character of aboriginal sign languages in our culture language especially in its spoken manifestation is the much vaunted hallmark of humanity the diagnostic trait of man that has made possible the creation of a civilization unknown to any other terrestrial organism through our inheritance of a culture language culture is in a sense bred into man and yet language is viewed as a force which can destroy us through its potential for objectification and classification according to popular mythology the naming of the animals of eden while giving adam and eve a certain power over nature also destroyed the prelinguistic harmony between them and the rest of the natural world and contributed to their eventual expulsion from paradise later the post babel development of diverse language families isolated man from man as well as from nature steiner 1975 language in other words as the central force animating human culture is both our salvation and damnation our constant war with words shanks 1971 is waged on both internal and external battlegrounds this culturally determined ambivalence toward language is particularly apparent when we encounter humans or hominoid animals who for one reason or another must rely upon gestural forms of communication the sign of four was first released to magazines in 1890 it was later published in book format and is also known by the
