The Blackwell Encyclopedia of Sociology: N-P 2007 all people suffer instances of personal loss that cause distress all too often their discomfort is treated as a medical issue requiring treatment usually through medication melvyn l fein argues for a broader understanding of loss and losing that offers another approach which he characterizes as resocialization indeed how a person thinks feels and acts may all need to be reorganized if personal distress is to be overcome fein urges that we distinguish between the loss of something we once possessed and losing something that never came to fruition thus it is possible never to achieve vital social roles social statuses and or personal bonds despite our individual efforts while some of these losses are not necessarily problematic others are extremely painful unfortunately rather than investigate the source of this discomfort distraught individuals frequently seek refuge in simplistic solutions as a consequence one of the reasons the medical model remains dominant is that the alternative is imperfectly understood fein presents a compelling case for a sociological interpretation of personal distress although he acknowledges that some personal suffering derives from biological sources and that mental illnesses can spill over to cause social dysfunctions he argues that it is important to recognize the social causes of human suffering in thereby recognizing the limitations of the human condition most of us can do better than blindly accept an inherited dedication to the medical model on loss and losing offers a legitimate option without denying the reality of human suffering

Handbook of Neurosociology 2012-07-09 in this fresh more structural alternative to other texts for the marriage and family course seccombe and warner provide a comprehensive look at close relationships and the family in just 15 chapters examining close relationships and families by placing them in social context the authors offer a unique emphasis on the structural and relational aspects of the family with a focus on family resilience the text weaves together a macro view social structural analysis of close relationships with the macro an individualist view the authors demonstrate the interaction of theory and methodology in family studies in chapter 2 and blend cutting edge research and practical applications throughout among the highlights of this first edition are the exceptionally thorough exploration of the topics of singlehood and cohabitation in chapter 7 and the unique six chapter core 8 13 that focuses on all aspects of parenthood and the challenges and crises that families face today the authors emphasis on family resilience and how families can be strengthened is reflected in the constructing strong families boxes that appear throughout the text these features encourage students to apply groundbreaking research on what makes a family strong to their own families and in the concluding chapter looking ahead helping families flourish which examines the factors that successful families regardless of ethnicity culture or social class consistently exhibit
