Reflection and Software Engineering 2003-05-15 the picture that pastors have of themselves and of their experiences in the ministry is ambivalent on the one hand they find the pastoral work which they perform meaningful important and relevant on the other hand pastors suffer from chronic stress of some sort caused by different factors on the micro meso and macro level of religion church and society many pastors experience the modernization and subsequently the secularization process as a very serious problem which negatively influences religious life within the parish pastors are bowed down by uncertainty over how their work contributes to the parish mission in today s society and even more so by doubts over what that mission is in particular the diaconal mission which direction can shall should the pastor take if neither the church nor the theological institutions are able to provide him or her with a clear frame of reference an attractive perspective a convincing policy a plausible course of action and a meaningful set of aims goals and objectives there is no alternative but to risk taking responsibility for oneself and choosing one s own course of action to take this risk is not reckless or foolhardy as long as the choices are always informed by a religious self reflection that is open to tradition as well as to the future this allows the pastor to be his own guide to transgress useless customs and habits and cross the boundaries into as yet unknown territory the task of education must be to provide the foundation that enables the pastor to make those choices and take those risks in a well considered prudent and truly religious manner this study represents not only an interpretative description of some of the education for ministry in today s societal cultural and ecclesiastical context in the western world but also a proposal for a new model the reflective ministry model

Summary Measures of Population Health 2002 with the dramatic changes opec precipitated in the structure of world energy markets during the 1970s energy became a central concern to policymakers throughout the industrialized west this book examines the responses of public officials in three leading european nations the federal republic of germany france and the netherlands to the energy crisis as the study shows the proposed energy programs in the three countries shared remarkable similarities yet the policy outcomes were very different to explain why michael t hatch goes beyond the specific content of government energy policy to include an analysis of the policymaking process itself at the heart of the study is an exploration of the various dimensions of nuclear policy in west germany the political consensus on nuclear power that prevailed in the initial years following the energy crisis disintegrated as antinuclear citizens initiatives the courts and trade unions as well as the traditional political parties entered the policymaking process subsequent government efforts to resolve the political stalemate over nuclear power foundered in a morass of domestic electoral politics and an international debate over nuclear proliferation extending the analysis to comparisons with french and dutch nuclear strategies hatch argues that the critical factor in determining nuclear policy was the manner in which the political system structured the nuclear debate in contrast to west germany where the electoral and parliamentary systems enhanced the influence of the antinuclear greens the electoral system and constellation of political parties in france served to dissipate the influence of the antinuclear forces thus in france the nuclear program en countered few impediments in the netherlands as in west germany government policy was paralyzed in the face of antinuclear sentiment across a broad spectrum of dutch society hatch has provided here not only a useful examination of the development of energy policy in western europe but also a case study of the close interplay between policy and politics

Love and Mercy Teacher's Guide 2019-12-01 this book is the outcome of a research symposium sponsored by the association for educational communications and technology aect consisting of twenty four chapters including an introduction and conclusion it argues that informational content should not be the main element of education and that to provide more for learners it is necessary to go beyond content and address other skills and capabilities it also discusses the false premise that learning is complete when the information is known not when learners seek more their own directions answers and ideas the authors assert that the ability to synthesize solve problems and generate ideas is not based on specific content although education often focuses solely on teaching content further they state that content can be separated from the learning process and that instructional design and educational technology must be about the skills habits and beliefs to be learned
