the study of paleopathology has two very different constituencies the medical scientist and the zoologist paleontologist anthropologist their investigative procedures and professional jargon are different sometimes to the point of mutual incomprehensibility paleontologists anthropologists zoologists have a limited data base for the characterization and interpretation of pathology this must come from the human and veterinary medical experience what beyond intellectual satisfaction can the health care community expect from this relationship the past history of the appearance and dispersal of infectious disease and cancer is of considerable theoretical importance and leads to new insights on the nature and transmission of diseases that are otherwise ambiguous the discovery of rheumatoid arthritis in pre columbian north america exemplifies insights gained the current effort delineates osseous impact of disease as manifest in clinical populations diagnosed in life representation in the zoologic paleontologic and anthropologic record and assessment techniques that can be confidently applied the chapters form columns that provide the foundation for scientific critical thinking the actual integration of the information is in its application our purpose is to provide a data base and atlas of actually documented skeletal impact of diseases as population phenomenon an initial data base of reported skeletal pathology and a methodology for expanding this to new arenas the first section of the book examines the scientific basis of paleopathology its transition from speculation based musings resolution of misconceptions and the denouement of paleo epidemiology the second section provides holistic analysis of the gamut of pathology diseases with significant skeletal impact with a validated archeologic zoological paleontological record the third section provides a glossary to resolve the semantic challenges inherent to interdisciplinary efforts the fourth section provides an atlas of pathology representation in the fossil record ultimately this book intends to present a scientifically validated approach to recognition of disease in the archeological zoological and paleontological record superseding previous speculation based offerings

we shall examine the validity of 16 experimental designs against 12 common threats to valid inference by experiment we refer to that portion of research in which variables are manipulated and their effects upon other variables observed it is well to distinguish the particular role of this chapter it is not a chapter on experimental design in the Fisher 1925-1935 tradition in which an experimenter having complete mastery can schedule treatments and measurements for optimal statistical efficiency with complexity of design emerging only from that goal of efficiency insofar as the designs discussed in the present chapter become complex it is because of the intransigency of the environment because that is of the experimenter's lack of complete control
