in 1990 the groundbreaking television series twin peaks co created by david lynch and mark frost opened with a murder mystery when a beautiful homecoming queen wrapped in plastic washed up on a cold and rocky beach

laura palmer s character began as a plot device that triggered a small town to face its fractured self but after three seasons and a film laura palmer is no longer just a plot device instead of solely focusing on the murderer like most traditional storytelling at the time the audience gets to know the victim a complex young woman who explores her sexuality and endures incredible abuse laura s ghost women speak about twin peaks is an examination of laura palmer s legacy on the 30th anniversary of twin peaks palmer s character was one of the few frank and horrific representations of sexual abuse victims which did not diminish the strength and complexity of the victim sheryl lee who played laura palmer discusses the challenges of the role and how it has impacted herself as well as women she has met over the years many of whom are survivors of sexual abuse the role demanded lee give all of her vulnerability as an actor to this role this role is one she cannot escape one with which she will forever be identified it s a role that still haunts her today for many women this character represents them here was a woman who was not just a victim but who was owning her sexuality as well a woman coming into her own and discovering her sources of power this book is a reckoning in which women from the show and community speak about grief mischief humor sexuality strength weakness wickedness and survival cinema and secularism is the first collection to make the relationship between cinema and secularism thematic utilizing a number of different methodological approaches to examine their identification and differentiation across film theory film aesthetics film history and throughout global cinema the emergence of moving images and the history of cinema historically coincide with the emergence of secularism as a concept and discourse more than historically coinciding however cinema and secularism would seem to have and many contemporary theorists and critics seem to assume a more intrinsic almost ontological connection to each other while early film theorists and critics explicitly addressed questions about secularism religion and cinema once the study of film was professionalized and secularized in the western academy in both film studies and religious studies explicit and critical attention to the relationship between cinema and secularism rapidly declined indeed if one canvases film scholarship today one will find barely any works dedicated to thinking critically about the relationship between cinema and secularism extending the recent secular turn in the humanities and social sciences cinema and secularism provokes critical reflection on its titular concepts making contributions to theory philosophy criticism and history the chapters in this pioneering volume collectively interrogate the assumption that cinema is secular how secularism is conceived and related to cinema differently in different film cultures and whether the world is disenchanted or enchanted in cinema coming from intellectually diverse backgrounds in film studies religious studies and philosophy the interdisciplinary contributors to this book cover films and traditions of thought from america europe africa the middle east south asia and east asia in these ways cinema and secularism opens new areas of inquiry in the study of film and contributes to the ongoing interrogation of secularism more broadly how the blurring of media forms transmedia became the default for how we experience narratives and how that cultural transformation has redefined the worlds of education entertainment and our increasingly polarized public discourse over the past decade the power of narrative has been unleashed with awesome and terrifying consequences and it has been consumed in its blurred media forms by millions of people as news entertainment and education imagining transmedia edited by Ed Finn Bob Beard Joey Eschrich and Ruth Wylie explores the surprising ways that narratives working across media forms became the default grammar for both media consumption and personal expression and how multiplatform storytelling creates new media literacies and modes of civil discourse understanding this shift reveals transmedia as an essential building block of media literacy today transmedia is how we create interpret and participate in our increasingly mediated society it extends beyond popular culture into professional and public spheres while at the same time it fuels the misinformation and polarization that have contributed to America's fraying civic discourse reaching beyond traditional academic analyses this probing collection of essays and conversations features transmedia practitioners sharing their experiences and inviting readers to imagine the types of multimodal stories and experiences they might create prioritizing conversation over a single unified theory each section of this volume pairs thematically linked essays from international
