Your Money 1994-10 this report contains two independent reviews that are part of a series of reports the nao will be producing into savings reported by departments as part of the targets set by the 2007 comprehensive spending review the department for transport reported savings of 892 million of which the nao found that 43 per cent fairly represent realised cash savings 22 per cent may represent realised cash savings but with some uncertainty and 35 per cent may be overstated at the home office the nao sampled 338 million of 544 million reported savings and found 59 per cent of these fairly represent realised cash savings 24 per cent may represent realised cash savings but with some uncertainty and the nao has significant concerns over 17 per cent overall the government has set a target to generate annually cash releasing savings of 35 billion by 2010 11 the savings programme is based on the principle that the planned savings have already been removed from departments budgets departments therefore have to deliver savings to release enough cash to meet their spending plans or reduce activity compared with the planned level the nao is satisfied that in many cases both departments are achieving long term savings the main reasons for the nao s concerns are eighty per cent of the department for transport s reported savings relate to support for the rail industry the nao considers the benchmarks against which these savings were measured should have been revised in the light of the most recent information which would reduce the savings reported in 2008 09 the main reasons for the nao s concerns with around 17 per cent of savings reported by the home office were that reported gains were one off cash savings which will not permanently reduce the department s expenditure or were not new annual savings as the procurement actions had been taken in prior years

Baptist Missionary Review 1898 excerpt from on money and other trade questions being a review of mr wallace s speech on an inconvertible currency before entering on a review of mr wallace s arguments in favor of an inconvertible currency it is pertinent to define some expressions of frequent occurrence in the discussion of economic questions value is one of these there are two kinds of value value in use and value in exchange it is in the latter sense the expression is used by economists a thing to have value must have cost labor either in appropriating it or in producing it and sometimes in preserving it a thing which can be got without labor even though amongst the most useful of substances commands no value because a person will not give anything useful or agreeable which he possesses and which has cost him labor for that which he can get without the value of a commodity is its purchasing power or the quantity of any one thing or of things in general for which it will exchange if a barrel of flour will exchange for a pair of boots then one value of a barrel of flour is a pair of boots the price of a commodity is its value in money or the amount of money for which it will exchange if a bushel of wheat is sold for a dollar then the price or money value of the bushel of wheat is one dollar i have not in this paper attempted to classify mr wallace s arguments as from their incoherence and inconsistency with one another they are not susceptible of an intelligible classification moreover their crudities and fallacies are much more effectually exposed by taking them seriatim than by any possible groupings about the publisher forgotten books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books find more at forgottenbooks.com this book is a reproduction of an important historical work forgotten books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy in rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition we do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
