excerpt from woman in the past present and future the possession of wife and children taught primaeval man to regard a fixed abode as desirable hitherto he had ranged through the woods sleeping by night on trees or in caves when not driven away by wild beasts now he built himself a hut to which he returned after hunting and fishing the division of labor began the man hunted fished and fought the woman did the housework if the expression may be applied to this primitive age the uncertain returns of the chase the inclemency of the seasons forced the family when it increased in numbers to tame animals and use their milk and flesh for nourishment the hunter became a herdsman the children grew up intermarried the conception of incest belongs to a very much later period and thus gave rise successively to the patriarchal family the village community the tribe r the tribe became divided into many smaller tribes which when their numbers increased quarreled with each other about pasture land this quarrel for pasture land the desire to remain in a fruitful and pleasant district in spite of a thickening population was the origin of agriculture about the publisher forgotten books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books find more at forgottenbooks.com this book is a reproduction of an important historical work forgotten books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy in rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition we do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works integrated history and philosophy of science ihps is commonly understood as the study of science from a combined historical and philosophical perspective yet since its gradual formation as a research field the question of how to suitably integrate both perspectives remains open this volume presents cutting edge research from junior ihps scholars and in doing so provides a snapshot of current developments within the field explores the connection between ihps and other academic disciplines and demonstrates some of the topics that are attracting the attention of scholars who will help define the future of ihps

Work Motivation 2008-06-24

this book evaluates the results of two decades of research in history and computing in spite of the fact that a lot has been accomplished the report indicates critical places for improvement many historians and other humanities scholars seem satisfied with standard office tools which do not always suit their complex sources and research questions while more and more archival sources have become available in digital form there has not been enough attention to the development of computational methods to process and analyse them as a result the level of technical sophistication in many historical studies has remained rather low the authors propose a new research agenda and provide requirements for an adequate research infrastructure for future historical information science historically the first observation of a transmissible lytic agent that is specifically active against a bacterium bacillus anthracis was by a russian microbiologist nikolay gamaleya in 1898 at that time however it was too early to make a connection to another discovery made by dmitri ivanovsky in 1892 and martinus Beijerinck in 1898 on a non bacterial pathogen infecting tobacco plants thus the viral world was discovered in two of the three domains of life and our current understanding is that viruses represent the most abundant biological entities on the planet the potential of bacteriophages for infection treatment have been recognized after the discoveries by Frederick Twort and Felix d Hérelle in 1915 and 1917 subsequent phage therapy developments however have been overshadowed by the remarkable success of antibiotics in infection control and treatment and phage therapy research and development persisted mostly in the former soviet union countries russia and georgia as well as in france and poland the dramatic rise of antibiotic resistance and especially of multi drug resistance among human and animal bacterial pathogens however challenged the position of antibiotics as a single most important pillar for infection control and treatment thus there is a renewed interest in phage therapy as a possible additive alternative therapy especially for the infections that resist routine antibiotic treatment the basis for the revival of phage therapy is affected by a number of issues that need to be resolved before it can enter the arena which is traditionally reserved for antibiotics probably the most important is the regulatory issue how should phage therapy be regulated similarly to drugs then the co evolving nature of phage bacterial host relationship will be a major hurdle for the production of consistent phage formulae or should we resort to the phage products such as lysins and the corresponding engineered versions in order to have accurate and consistent delivery doses we still have very limited knowledge about the pharmacodynamics of phage therapy more data obtained in animal models are necessary to evaluate the phage therapy efficiency compared for example to antibiotics another aspect is the safety of phage therapy how do phages interact with the immune system and to what costs or benefits what are the risks in the course of phage therapy of transduction of undesirable properties such as virulence or antibiotic resistance genes how frequent is the development of bacterial host resistance during phage therapy understanding these and many other aspects of phage therapy basic and applied is the main subject of this topic
